Q: function to count words? the function should accept one input and then return the number of words in it. I'm having some trouble thinking of how to get the input from the function. What I have right now works, but I feel like there's a more functional way to write this.

words = input("count words. Enter the number of words: ")
def countWords():
    return int(words)
print(countWords())
```

A: You can directly use sum() along with the map()-reduce() operation:

def wordcount(text):
    return sum(1 for word in map(word_count, text.split()))
def word_count(word):
    return word.lower().count(' ') + 1
text = input("Enter text: ") wordcount(text)
```

Note that this answer does not take into account punctuation, but for counting the words it's fine.
