Thank you For Watching, Enjoy The Keyboaru-1Q: How to display base class variable to derived class's variable using template I am new to templates and I am stuck at the code below. #include using namespace std; template class A { public: int a; void foo(int b) { a = b; //cout class B : public A { }; int main() { A a; B b; a.foo(5); return 0; } I expect a = 5 and a is int as I have created int variable a inside A class. But when I run the program the cout statement is not printed. A: In this code you are using two different classes B and A. One is using as template parameter a base class, so if you wish to use the class A as template parameter, you need to define it as: template class A { public: int a; void foo(int b) { a = b; //cout Q: Changing the behavior of numpy's tolist and round when datetime.now() is passed to it I'm trying to run some code in which a numpy vector is generated and then 3da54e8ca3
