STREET FIGHTER EX COLLECTION PC-Hyperdrive25.exe Hack Tool Tutorial. STREET FIGHTER EX COLLECTION PC-Hyperdrive25.exe hack tool - cheats .Q: Is it possible to manage my creation, in a specific node, of a regular language? I am trying to learn the basics of regular expression, so I am following a course by University of Waterloo for that purpose. I have read through a lot of tutorials, and I think I have an understanding of how regular expressions work in most cases. However, I have something confusing me. In the lectures we have an example that we try to match, with an expression I can understand, but no one provides any clarification, so my question is about the following: Suppose we have the following regular expression: $((\epsilon(0)1)1)$ This would match, for instance, the following: a) abcabcba b) abcabcba c) abcaba d) abc e) abcb f) bcba We are asked to say whether this expression, $1((\epsilon(0)1)1)$ is a regular language or not. In my mind, it is a regular language, since a) was not described, and it is consistent with the rest of the expression, so it should match. However, we are told: (i) The regular expression $1((\epsilon(0)1)1)$ is not a regular language. How can I be sure the expression is not a regular language? I know I need to provide an example of a language that is not regular, for instance, the language: $0a1$. The correct answer is (ii) The regular expression $1((\epsilon(0)1)1)$ is a regular language. What am I missing? A: You've misunderstood the question. I'll try to clarify. I am asked to say whether this expression, $((\epsilon(0)1)1)$
