For some it is the dream job in the job centre, for others it is at the heart of their lives and careers. Whether making sandwiches, filing or sitting in an office, many people would not swap the day job for their dream job. And not one person would turn down the offer of £18.50 an hour, despite the reality of low pay or unfair dismissal for many workers. So when potential vacancies came up on the JobCentre+ website, or on the streets, people were happy to say 'yes'. And just like any job, the best one for them is the one they want. However, the jobs available have not always been ideal. Latest data from the International Labour Organisation (ILO) has revealed the true effect of a job on people's lives, and it is not a good one. Although it can have a positive impact on mental health, it is sometimes a cause of stress, anxiety and depression. The data covers 385 occupations across 175 countries and gives the sense of 'life time' or 'until retirement'. And although the trend is encouraging, the risk is that for young people, the chance of their workplace killing their mental health is increasing. Jobs in the UK at a glance Job satisfaction: 60% Happy with company 60% Happy with colleagues 70% Able to see a future in their job 70% Working with people they like 32% Have a long and close relationship with colleagues 51% Opportunity to develop their skills Job satisfaction by age group Out of all the 385 occupations, the research suggested that the most stressful were teacher and pharmacist. And it is a long

PlexTurbo is an application for your Plex media server that lets you benefit from this file indexing service, locally storing your files on the system's RAM Memory. This storage allows PlexTurbo to speed up search for files through caching and compress them. The application supports multiple Plex media servers and allows you to use all your internal RAM Memory for Plex caching. The size of this cache can be configured and it will be used for all the Plex servers installed on your PC. Each Plex server is identified by a unique name which can be edited in the application. Plex servers can be managed through the application and allow you to properly locate your media files. Requirements: In order to use PlexTurbo, you need to have the following prerequisites. - Plex Media Server 1.7.1 or later - Full Plex Server installation (whole system or the individual files) - Windows Vista or above - RAM 16MB or more The application is designed to work with the following types of PLEXTOR SSDs. - Any PLEXTOR SSD, previous models are supported if update installation is required. The application has the following built-in features. - Plex caching - Plex cache size configuration - Plex cache auto management - Plex cache cleanup - Plex cache balancing - Plex server name configuration How to use PlexTurbo: - Click the Start button and click the PlexTurbo.exe icon. A window will open and will prompt you to install the PlexTurbo service on your system. You will need to click OK on that window in order to install the service. After installation is complete, a quick start guide will be displayed on screen. When you first start the application, you will need to create an account. You will then be presented with several options to configure the PlexTurbo application. The first option is Plex caches. Select a Plex cache location on your system and the application will list all available drives that the cache can access. Select the drive that will be used for the Plex cache. Synthesis of isotopically labeled SAMHD1 variants and their application for NMR structure determination. SAMHD1 is a dGTP-specific 5'-nucleosidase involved in nucleotide metabolism and innate antiviral immunity. SAMHD1 is ubiquitously expressed in the majority of cells and mutations in the gene lead to adult onset Aicardi-Goutieres syndrome. SAMHD1 has no known catalytic residues or substrate binding site, and the structure of the protein is unknown. We developed an enzymatic approach to the incorporation of isotopic labels into SAMHD1 to facilitate the structure determination of this protein. Our method is based on ligation of peptide fragments and subsequently allows the direct incorporation of natural and isotopically labeled amino acids into native SAMHD1 protein. To evaluate the method, we synthesized isotopically labeled SAMHD1 variants with the functionality of wild type protein, expressed them in bacteria and isolated them by affinity chromatography. The obtained variants were used for NMR structure determination. Our enzymatic method allows the direct incorporation of isolated and unlabeled proteins into site-specific labeled variants, and has several advantages over previously used protein expression-based and chemical proteolysis-based methods. A single micrometastatic tumor cell can stimulate solid tumor growth in the adjacent tissue, a process called the seed and soil hypothesis. Our preliminary data show that the pre-implantation tumor, the metastatic tumor cell and the adjacent tissue all support tumor growth. We propose the following hypothesis: that the tumor is seeded into the lung by the pre-implantation tumor, and grows in the lung in response to growth factors secreted from the pre-implantation tumor and by
