ANQUINET'S ADVICE While working at Ralph Lauren, A.F. Anqueten began working on the costume designs for The Lion King and The Little Mermaid, with help from his wife, Jennifer, to give him ideas of how to create the most striking look. Both films starred Beyoncé Knowles. Anqueten's created a part of Anqueten Afro's image, a movie inspired by the one used in the Broadway version, which he created with Diane Von Furstenberg. In the original The Lion King, Hamlet's costumes, the ones on the left side of the picture, were created by Anqueten Afro. Beyoncé's, which are on the right side, were created by Anqueten Afro's wife. In the book The Lion King — A New Journey, Anqueten Afro explains how the wardrobes were created. "We began by taking the original costumes and altering them to create what I call a hybrid style. Sometimes it could be fairly extensive. For instance, the lion costumes had been changed so that there were no tucks in the sleeves, no collars, no buttons, and no buttons on the pants. In some cases, this could be very dramatic, as in the opening, where the granny and Steve look like a cross between a sci-fi spaceship and an A-Team spaceship, right down to a doily for the seat cover. "The bow on their head, their wings, and the tail were made of a sort of camouflage netting, and there were actual pouches tied behind each of their backs, holding extra wooden parts that were used for the rock bridge and its poles. These wooden poles also were hidden beneath their clothes. "The whole thing was painted with a green and a metallic silver color. The main difference between these and the originals was in the design. "In the original movie, the lions were represented with the design on their foreheads. But in the Broadway version, the design on the lions' heads was part of their overall image. Each of the

Fairfield University to host 'Imagine a World Without HIV' conference NEW HAVEN, Conn. -- The epidemic of HIV continues to cripple communities around the globe and a three-day conference at Fairfield University that began Wednesday is working to promote the elimination of this disease. Conference participants are attending from all over the world, including from Cameroon in Central Africa, South Africa in Southern Africa and Russia in Eastern Europe. Fairfield University will host the three-day Imagine a World Without HIV, the theme of this year's conference, from Oct. 18-20 in the Quinnipiac College Field House on the campus. The conference will have a series of sessions that shed light on the epidemic and its causes. Three panels will be held on Wednesday and Thursday that focus on the spread of the virus, infections, and medical treatments for HIV. There will be an opportunity for free HIV tests on Friday. James Kent, a law professor and U.N. special rapporteur on human rights and the law, will kick off the event on Wednesday. He will speak about the victims of HIV and their legal rights. "Human rights are the foundation for an ethical international order," he said in a statement. "The right to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health is also a right of human dignity, and it is a right of the human rights of every individual." Fairfield University President Andrew Hall called this a "historic moment," as HIV continues to ravage the world. "I am proud to partner with other community leaders in the global fight against HIV/AIDS to expand the base of knowledge and service in order to improve the lives of millions living with HIV/AIDS," he said. "In this very special time, we are proud to expand Fairfield University's global commitment to support people living with HIV/AIDS." Delegate Tanjawn Daun, who comes from Thailand, will talk about infectious diseases as he leads a panel discussion on the dissemination of HIV. "Most people do not know that some people are not OK; they have not caught HIV yet, but they can spread the disease," he said. "As a medical doctor, I have seen that all people in developing countries are not getting basic medical treatment. They cannot even give their children medical care. They can't even get food." Conference organizers say there are 6.1 million people in the United States with HIV. The conference schedule
